CORALINE AND OTHER STORIES, by Neil Gaiman 1. CORALINE *5/5 stars I really felt like a kid reading this story, and I don't know why I've been putting off reading it for so long. Coraline feels fantastic to me for one major reason: I used to be able to read books from cover to cover and nowadays have to force myself to read sometimes.

When Coraline goes through the door, she ends up in an entirely different world: it's kind of like her own, but something's a little off. In the other world, Coraline has an other mother (the beldam), an other father, and other neighbors. And bonus, cats can talk. Coraline decides this other world is weird (we agree) and so she heads back home.
